

How do we hear noise?

- Movement causes vibrations, or waves, in the air that produce sound once they reach our ears.
- Sound is measured in units called decibels (dBA).
- An average person's ear can perceive a 3 dBA or greater change in noise levels.
- A 10 dBA reduction sounds half as loud to the human ear; a 10 dBA increase sounds twice as loud.

