Driver Tips for Thanksgiving 2014: I-90, I-5, and US 2

■ Peak Thanksgiving Day Routes. Find the best time to travel on I-5, I-90 Snoqualmie Pass, and US 2.

UPDATE: Travel estimates for Eastbound I-90 for Wednesday Nov. 26, have been adjusted due to needed maintenance and lane closures after a truck struck the Stampede Pass Bridge Tuesday. If you're headed east, you'll want to re-check the charts.

Best travel times for:

- I-5 Bellingham to the Canadian Border
- US 2 from Leavenworth over Stevens Pass
- I-90 over Snoqualmie Pass
- I-5 Olympia to Tacoma
- Backups are expected in the Tacoma Narrows Bridge manual toll lanes Thanksgiving evening between 5 and 10 p.m.

UPDATE: As of Monday, Nov. 24, the Chinook, Cayuse and North Cascades Highway passes are all closed for the winter.

Thanksgiving 2014 News Release

State highways across Washington will see typical heavy holiday weekend traffic. Longer-than typical wait times at ferry docks and Canadian border crossings are also expected most of the holiday weekend.

WSDOT crews work hard to ensure that travelers reach their destination safely and advise drivers to plan ahead to save time and frustration. Travel times are significantly lighter Wednesday and Thursday mornings and on Monday.

What do the colors mean for drivers?

Traffic analysts looked at how many cars were on the road on past Thanksgiving weekends. The vertical axis shows how many cars are projected to be on the road for each hour (shown on the horizontal axis). As the graphs turn from green to yellow, drivers can expect some congestion. At the hours shown as red, traffic analysts predict travel will reach capacity for that stretch of roadway. Once a roadway reaches capacity, any small incident can cause significant backups.

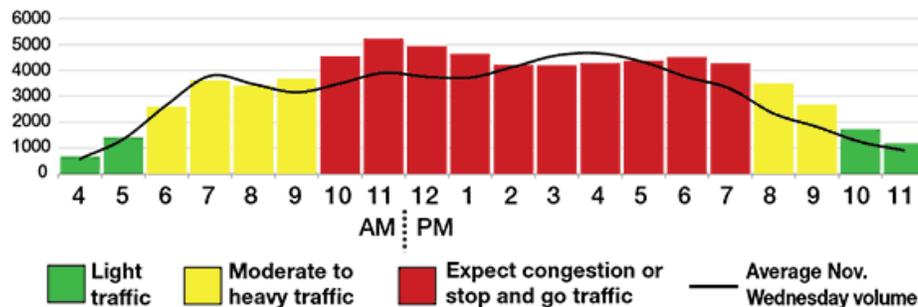

What about the black line on each graph?

The horizontal black line shows typical traffic. This gives drivers more information on how the Thanksgiving 2014 holiday weekend travel may relate to a typical fall weekend.
