

June 9, 2008

Storm warning for the passes; WSDOT crews gearing up for snow

If you plan on traveling through the passes tonight be prepared for winter-like driving conditions .

A storm bringing cold temperatures is expected to hit the western slopes of the Cascades hard this evening and that may mean snow in the passes, especially I-90, US 12 and the North Cascades Highway and Chinook Pass.

Our crews will be on the roads today and tonight applying deicer as necessary to prevent the road surface from icing up. As much as 6 inches of snow could fall overnight.

Know before you go: Get current pass and weather conditions from the 5-1-1 traveler information phone system and the web .

Please forward this e-mail to others who might be interested. Subscribe to other e-mail updates from WSDOT, unsubscribe or send us your feedback.