Central Sound continues to be the highest traveled corridor in the WSF system, with 12.4 million riders per year, down from 13.2 million passengers in 2006 and a peak of 14.4 million passengers in 1999.

Over 60% of weekday trips in the corridor are associated with work/school, while more than 68% of Saturday trips are recreation/shopping.

The share of riders over the age of 64 increased in the Central Sound Corridor from 9% in 2006 to 16% in 2013. The Seattle–Bainbridge route exhibited the most significant shift in rider age in the corridor, changing from about 8% to 17% over 64 years of age.

The Central Sound Corridor exhibits a shift in trip frequency from high frequency use patterns towards more moderate trip frequency.

A decrease in the share of vehicle boardings ranged from nine percentage points on the Seattle–Bremerton route, to seven points on the Seattle–Bainbridge route, to three points on Edmonds–Kingston.

There was some increase in the number of trips to and around the terminals on all of the routes in this corridor and a corresponding decrease in trips farther away from the terminals on each side of the crossing.
