

Always safety first,

Flying in the mountains of Idaho is a serious, challenging endeavor and the number of recent accidents attests to the fact. The Idaho Division of Aeronautics provides preferred procedure guides that include proper planning, communication, traffic patterns and inflight decision-making.

Download the latest version of these preferred procedure guides at: www.itd.idaho.gov/aero

Click on Publications and Airport Operating Procedures

These procedures are not a substitute for proper mountain flying training and it is strongly recommended that that visiting pilots obtain an airport checkout before attempting many of its backcountry airports. The Idaho Aviation Association now has a page where instructors list their services and specialties at: www.idahoaviation.com/instructors.php

Enjoy your flight in Idaho....safely!

Dan Etter

Aviation Safety Manager