Grand opening of new pickup and drop-off area in Clinton

I was in Clinton today celebrating the grand opening of our new pickup and drop-off area on Ferry Dock Road. The safe, more accessible vehicle loading and unloading zone reopened earlier this month, following seven months of construction. The $3 million passenger and ADA improvement project was funded through the 2015 Connecting Washington funding package. Special thanks to all our Clinton customers and neighbors for your patience during construction!

Thank you to everyone who braved the weather to join us for today’s ribbon cutting ceremony at our new pickup and drop-off area on Ferry Dock Road in Clinton!

Industry day for prospective contractors

We had an industry day last week for prospective contractors that want to be a part of our upcoming ferry electrification projects. More than 100 people from across

Sidewalk closed in front old Seattle terminal

Demolition of our old terminal building at Colman Dock is in full swing! To keep the public safe during this work, we closed the sidewalk on the west side of Alaskan Way between Marion and Columbia streets this week and it’s expected to remain off limits to pedestrians for another two to three weeks. People walking should follow detour signs and use the east side of Alaskan Way.

Crews are currently demolishing our old terminal building at Colman Dock in Seattle.

Yesler Way closed near Colman Dock

If you’re planning to drive in, out or around our Seattle... the maritime supply chain attended the event, which was hosted by Maritime Blue. Most of the attendees were from Washington state, including a wide spectrum of small enterprises to large firms, as well as women- and minority-owned businesses. There were even a few who traveled from as far as Alabama, Norway and New Zealand!

Students tour Colman Dock

A group of civil engineering students from Walla Walla University and their professor toured the new Seattle terminal building at Colman Dock this week and got a behind-the-scenes look at the construction and installation of the new overhead loading cabin at Slip 3.

Thanks to Alan Johnson from the Colman Dock project team for showing Walla Walla University students around the construction at our Seattle terminal!

terminal, make sure you continue to give yourself some extra travel time because of Alaskan Way Viaduct demolition work. Yesler Way between Western Avenue and Alaskan Way closed yesterday and is expected to remain closed for about a week. People driving off a ferry and using the Yesler Way vehicle exit must turn onto northbound or southbound Alaskan Way.

Help choose our next sailing schedule cover

You have one more day to help select our #FerryFotoContest winner! We've posted our six finalists a couple times on our @wsferries Twitter page this week. “Like” one of them or “like” them all! The image with the most “likes” at noon Friday, Oct. 18, will be named the winner and their photograph will be featured on our Winter 2020 sailing schedule!

One of these six finalists will be featured on the cover of our Winter 2020 sailing schedule!

Terminal engineers tour Vigor shipyard

In the spirit of teamwork, we encourage teams to visit different work sites to see how our system works as a whole. That’s why I was happy to find out that several of our terminal engineers went on a tour of Vigor shipyard in Seattle this week. The event was organized by Engineers Without Borders, which WSF Bridge Engineer Chris Stearns is a volunteer for and brought along three of his colleagues.

Terminal engineers Eric Robinson, Cesar Mayor, Chris Stearns and Ron Matyas check out Kittitas while in drydock at Vigor shipyard in Seattle.
