

Seattle's Marion Street Pedestrian Bridge closes tonight

Heads up if you walk on or off our ferries in Seattle! The Marion Street Pedestrian Bridge above Alaskan Way in front of Colman Dock will close permanently at 10:30 tonight, Sept. 5, for viaduct demolition work. Until further notice, walk-on passengers should use sidewalks between the terminal building and First Avenue. Stairs and elevators are available on Alaskan Way between Marion and Columbia streets.

Police will be at key locations to help pedestrians cross Alaskan Way until the new bridge opens in conjunction with our new Seattle terminal in the days ahead.

For safety reasons, Alaskan Way will be closed to vehicle traffic between Yesler Way and Madison Street from 10 tonight through 5 a.m. tomorrow, Sept. 6, as viaduct demolition crews remove the pedestrian bridge above. Marion Street, just west of Alaskan, will remain closed so crews can demolish that remaining section of the viaduct.

Visit us at the Mukilteo Lighthouse Festival

Stop by the WSF booth at the Mukilteo Lighthouse Festival this weekend! From 11 a.m. through 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 7-8, your ferry friends will be there to answer your questions about the new Mukilteo Multimodal Ferry Terminal, set to open in fall 2020, and to talk about employment opportunities with ferries.

Stop by the Mukilteo Lighthouse Festival if you want to know more about jobs with WSF or our new Mukilteo terminal.

Wooden Boat Festival in Port Townsend

Even though the busy Labor Day holiday is behind us, this weekend is shaping up to be another busy one for ferry travel! In addition to the Mukilteo Lighthouse Festival, there is the

Although access into Colman Dock will remain unchanged for people driving, biking or riding a motorcycle, they should continue to expect increased congestion due to viaduct demolition work.

I appreciate your patience while we work to complete our new Seattle terminal building and pedestrian connections!

Celebrating first Seahawks Blue Friday of the season

We will have staff on the busy morning commute sailings from Bainbridge and Bremerton tomorrow, Sept. 6, to provide our customers with information about the Marion Street Pedestrian Bridge closure. And on those sailings, walk-on customers will receive a Blue Friday rally card, courtesy of the Seattle Seahawks!

12s braved the January cold for a photo op on the passenger deck during our last Blue Friday event earlier this year for a Seahawks wild card game.
